“It is the supposed murder of Colonel Barclay of the Royal Malloys, at Aldershot, which I am investigating,” says Sherlock Holmes, descending on Watson at his Paddington home one summer evening. Barclay was found dead with his wife insensible beside him. Footmarks and traces of a small animal are discovered outside. “Neither dog, nor cat, nor monkey, nor any creature that we are familiar with,” says Holmes. What was this strange beast? Why had Mrs. Barclay been heard screaming at her husband “You coward! Give me back my life”?

What scientific tools did Holmes have at his disposal? Where in the canon are they referenced, and under what circumstances? From where did Holmes acquire them? Join us for the answers to these questions and more as Michael Barton explores the devices, instruments and weapons in Holmes’s Victorian arsenal -- with examples from his collection on display.
